

Used religiously, "God" means the primal source and the final end of the mystery of existence, i.e, both our own existence and all existence, by virtue of which our lives alone become really possible and are ^{really} worth living in spite of fate and death, guilt and condemnation, doubt and meaninglessness.

n.d.; rev. 5 October 2002