

1. Reality is what is disclosed through experience—and reason based thereon.

2. There are two main forms of this experiential-rational disclosure of reality: empirical-rational and existential-rational.

3. Correspondingly, there are two main forms of the reality thus disclosed: the immediate reality disclosed empirical-rationally; and the ultimate reality disclosed existential-rationally.

26 November 2005